energy and climate change is a pressing matter for the U.S. This approach promotes new partnerships with Mexico and Canada. Mexico, Canada and the U.S. must begin substantive negotiations on a bilateral energy trade agreement (ETOA) at the earliest possible date to put an end to the world's worst trade-impediment, and reduce the economic damage that has been caused by U.S. protectionist trade policy. The new ETOA would involve energy trade, energy security, energy efficiency, and environmental protection. We already have a framework for an ETOA, the North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA) which has already resulted in improved energy efficiency standards in the energy sector. Despite the progress that has been made, the new Trump administration will need to work with Congress and the State Department to make NAFTA work for the American people. TAKE ACTION! The time to act is now to push for a new energy trade agreement. Call your Representative and ask them to support the new ETOA. Russia The Kremlin is desperate to keep its waning influence in the Middle East in a country strategically positioned along its border with Europe. Russia is the world's second-largest oil exporter, the world's fourth-largest natural gas exporter, and has the fourth-largest nuclear energy production capacity, but still must rely on crude from elsewhere. Trump's foreign policy will prioritize pro-Russia energy deals. Like with OPEC, Trump will seek to work with the Russian government to bring stability and security to the world's largest oil and gas producer. The Trump administration will prioritize Russian-American oil and gas deals to strengthen American allies and take advantage of market opportunities. The new administration will use its international influence to 82157476af
